Outskirts Press, United States, 2009. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 226 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Whoosh! The animal catcher s net scoops up a stray alley cat in a lonely downtown alley. Locked in a cage in the city pound van, the spunky alley cat struggles to get away. The van hits a bump on a steep San Francisco street, and the door to the alley cat s cage jiggles loose. When the van stops to pick up a stray hound dog, the alley cat makes a gutsy escape. In the middle of the night, Dan and Catrina hear noises outside their house. A burglar? Yes, it s a cold, scared, wet cat burglar cowering in a corner of their window well. Because the cat is so hungry, Dan and Catrina nickname it Starvin Marvin. The name sticks, even though they later learn the furry bundle is a female cat. They quickly fall in love with Marvin and keep her. Everyone in the neighborhood loves Marvin. Everyone except Nosy Nellie, the snoopy 82-year-old lady who lives next door. For Nellie, all cats spell trouble! The spry woman with the long, gray braid down her back gets her nickname because when it comes to business, Nellie is more interested in other people s. Being a busy body will finally get her the credit she deserves. The mayor selected her to get the city s Good Neighbor Award, and she has her speech all ready for the big day. Trouble doubles when Dan and Catrina adopt another cat from the shelter, so Marvin can learn to be a house cat. The new cat named Skinny Minnie looks just like Marvin. When Nosy Nellie learns about another cat, she plots to cause some trouble of...
