There is a good beginning of benevolent institutions. Educationally it is acenter. A BusinessCollege, a Roman Catholic College, the Branch State Normal School, and the University of Southern California are here. The school privileges, although in their infancy, are firstclass. The higher educational interests of the great southwest portion of the Union must as naturally gather here as do the commercial industries. It is only thirteen miles to the seaside watering-place of Santa Monica, and twentytwo to the port of Wilmington, with both of which it is connected by railroad. The city has electric lights, street cars, and a good water system. The valuation of the real and personal property is between nine and ten millions, and as this is based upon what the property would bring at a forced sale for cash, the real value is much greater. The rate of taxation in the city is seventy-six cents and in the county one dollar and thirty cents, on one hundred dollars. There are several large hotels, and another, still larger, is nearly finished, besides numerous boarding-houses, and it is said that their capacity is not equal to the demands made upon them. There is a public library, and the usual proportion of banks and newspapers. From the weekly Mirror of January 6, 1883, we take the following summary of the manufacturing industries of the city with an approximation of the number of workmen employed in each: --...
